THE WORKSHOP

This workshop takes an in-depth look at how teachers can effectively supervise students' term papers and theses. During the workshop, participants will get to know various tools that can help them guide students through every stage of the process—from conceptualizing a topic and formulating a research question or problem, to organizing the writing process and addressing potential obstacles, all the way to revising the text to make it coherent and reader-friendly. We will reflect on discipline-specific considerations for planning meetings and forms of supervision, so that all participants can develop their own approach for future supervision processes.

THE PARTICIPANTS WILL BE BE ABLE TO

- reflect on personal and discipline-specific preferences for supervision processes.
- select and effectively use various tools for different stages of the supervision process.
- support students during the writing process and help them overcome potential obstacles.
