

Counselling Guide for Contact Persons in cases of disadvantage, discrimination, sexualized violence and bullying

According to § 7 of the Guideline for Respectful Cooperation and Protection against Discrimination, Sexualized Violence and Bullying at Paderborn University, affected persons have the right to confidential counselling and support at Paderborn University and/or to file an official complaint with the Complaints Office.

The Equal Opportunity Office of Paderborn University has created a counselling guide for (first-time) counselors. Based on guiding questions, central information can be gathered and an (initial) conversation can be conducted.¹ The counseling aims at clarifying the situation, providing information about relevant support services and, if necessary, raising a complaint. In any case, strict confidentiality must be ensured.

What to do?

1. Attention to basic aspects of consulting

- Assure confidentiality and data protection
- Accompaniment instead of action
- No action without consent
- Encourage, strengthen those seeking advice, empowerment
- In case of uncertainty, seek advice yourself (see list of possible contacts).

2. Collection and structuring of information on the incident

- Exploration of the concern/expectations
- Collection and recording of central information
- Ask the person concerned to write a memory log (see example)

3. Options for action and offers of support

- Focus on personal processing and/or dealing with responsible parties
- Inform about the Guideline for Respectful Cooperation at UPB.
- Which strategies can be devoloped? What possibilities exist? Mediation meeting? File a complaint?
- Is it possible to listen to/involve other involved persons?
- Is it possible/necessary to involve the next superior? Note: According to § 7 of the guideline, official channels do not have to be followed.
- Does a solution in your own area not seem possible?
 - Is it possible to refer to another office/person according to § 8 of the guideline?Provide information on (external) counseling options, establish contact/handover meeting/cooperation, if necessary.
 - Provide contact information/names and addresses to those seeking advice, give confidence and direction, an invitation to come back.
 - If requested, accompaniment during a formal complaint procedure according to § 9 of the guideline.

All data must be kept confidential, logs must be kept secure and inaccessible to third parties, no further action without consent.
